MT6572 Description Panasonic is a manufacturer of cellphones and digital cameras. The Panasonic TAB A1000 was one of its phones. The devices were sold as the Panasonic TAB A1000 (TS) and Panasonic TAB A1000 (AS). The range consisted of two models: a 16.4-megapixel model (the TS) and a 8.4-megapixel model (the AS). The main difference between the two models is in the display resolution and the front camera. The TS came with a 3.2-inch 800x480-pixel capacitive touchscreen, and the AS came with a 2.8-inch 240x320-pixel resistive touchscreen. The rest of the specifications were identical. The Panasonic TAB A1000 is a slider-style smartphone. The face of the phone consists of a 2.8-inch LCD display and a slider mechanism. The slider mechanism opens to reveal the front-facing camera and the earpiece speaker. The rear panel consists of a 3.2-inch TFT LCD display, a 5-megapixel autofocus camera with video recording, a microSD slot, a mini-USB slot, a headphone jack, and a microphone. There were two key versions of the TAB A1000, which were released in different regions. The TAB A1000 (AS) was sold in Europe, Asia, and Australia, whereas the TAB A1000 (TS) was sold in North America. The TAB A1000 (AS) came with the same basic hardware specifications, but the TAB A1000 (TS) had hardware specifications closer to those of the TAB A1000 (NT) that was released a few months later. Specifications The Panasonic TAB A1000 comes with a slide-out touchscreen, an autofocus camera, a microSD memory card slot, and a SIM card slot. There are two cameras: a 5-megapixel autofocus camera with video recording and a 2.5-megapixel camera. The maximum resolution of the autofocus camera is 1280x720 pixels. There are also two microphones: a primary microphone and a secondary microphone. The Panasonic TAB A1000 also has a 576 MHz single-core Qualcomm Snapdragon 400 processor, 512 MB of RAM, 4 GB of internal storage, and a microSD card slot. The battery capacity is 1,800 mAh.
